

Butterfield Opens Applications for 2022 Scholarship

Jan 25 2022

George Town, Grand Cayman—25 January 2022: Butterfield is now accepting applications for its Butterfield Undergraduate Scholarship in the Cayman Islands. Each year, the scholarship awards US$30,000 to an outstanding Caymanian student who is pursuing a first college or university degree on a full-time basis overseas. Eligible students are invited to apply by completing an application form available on Butterfield’s website.

The scholarship was established in 1993 in celebration of Butterfield’s 25th anniversary in the Islands. Tenable for up to four academic years, the criteria for selection includes academic excellence, community involvement and sporting attainments, financial need, and a candidate’s demonstrated ability to lead. The application deadline is Friday, 25 March, 2022.

Andrew Burns, Butterfield’s Group Head of Human Resources, said, “This scholarship has been running for nearly three decades now and it is testament to Butterfield’s continued commitment to support our local community and invest in its future. Later this year we will also be recruiting for our graduate trainee programme and summer student employment programme, both of which provide young people in Cayman with an opportunity to gain professional experience and build industry connections as they look to progress their careers.”
